It is interesting to note that the "Romanic ballet" is connected with the concept of "magnificence," which is often associated with the Renaissance era. However, the ballet is not only a display of grandeur, but also a means of storytelling and expression of emotions. The "fanciful" characters and settings allow for a rich and diverse range of narratives to be explored. The "grand" elements of the ballet are not only visually impressive, but also serve to convey deeper messages and themes. Overall, the "Romanic ballet" is a unique blend of artistry and storytelling, offering a window into the rich and complex world of the Renaissance era.
